Refugees From the Storm

“Although I never imagined I would feel at home elsewhere, the minute we settled in Charleston, it was as if we had always been here. Everyone is so friendly, so warm. There is great appreciation for the work we carry and we fit in to the existing art venues comfortably. We feel a bit like refugees that have come into safe harbor from a financial storm of unimaginable strength. What a relief to be here,” Gallery Owner Maggie Kruger’s comments after relocating M Gallery from Florida to Charleston. Certainly not the first time someone has washed ashore in this great city and probably not the last, M Gallery joins the fabulous art community of Charleston’s Gallery Row on Broad Street in the famed historic district.
